SIMPLE AND OPEN TO GOD

A Reflection by Dennis Bensiek, FSCB

I have lived in our house in Turin since last July, where I am entering into the life of the parish community of Santa Giulia. One of my spheres of mission is the catechism for the kids in elementary school. One afternoon, I arrived in the oratory to teach a lesson to the students of the second grade. I was planning to start with an introduction to the Old Testament. After we had prayed and sung together, I cieli [The Heavens], I started to recount the story of creation as told in the Book of Genesis. The lesson was prepared well: the text to read, the path to follow, the pictures to show them. After a few minutes, there were twelve hands raised. “You already have questions?” I asked. “Alright then, let’s hear them!”. At that moment, the avalanche let loose: “How is it possible that God created the Earth if there was the Big Bang?”; “How old is the Earth?”; “What does the Bible say about dinosaurs and Neanderthals?”. It only took a few seconds for my perfectly planned lesson to fall apart. I started to respond to the questions that the kids had, and without realizing it, an entire hour passed in which we spoke about the creation of the world, about what the kids had learned at school, and what the Church teaches. The play time at the end of catechism, usually the most-awaited moment, was by then completely forgotten.

This is one of the many examples that have made me understand that staying with kids is truly a learning experience: it is their questions that open them up to God, not the beautifully structured lessons of Catechism.

Another episode has accompanied me in these months. In previous years, many of the kids have invited their classmates to catechism. The oratory of Santa Giulia has become for them a stable point of reference, especially during the pandemic: a place that is always open, a place where they can look at others face to face, stay together and play, and ask their questions. A place, in fact, to propose to friends! Thanks to the missionary push of a few of our regular attendees, I have found myself in front of children who have never frequented catechism or received a sacrament. Together with the other priests of the house, we decided to accommodate all of them. At the end of an afternoon of catechism, one of them came up to me and asked: “Fr. Dennis, I want to be baptized. All my friends are baptized.” Stupefied by the confidence with which this kid had addressed me, I responded: “Beautiful! But we must talk to your parents.” A couple of nights later I went to dinner at his family’s house. After a long evening of chit-chat on many different themes, the father of the family said to me: “You know, Fr. Dennis, in my life I have had negative experiences with the Church. Lately, I have a hard time believing in a benevolent God who loves me. But who am I to impede my son from having a different experience. I agree that he should be baptized.” His reaction made my jaw drop: with immense wonder, I recognized the open-mindedness of this father that, notwithstanding everything, had intuited that his son had encountered a healthy place, a home that makes him grow. I have had the grace to baptize four kids in third and fourth grade. It was incredibly moving to ask the kids the questions that usually you ask the parents of the newborn during the rite of acceptance that precedes the baptismal liturgy: “What do you desire?”. “I desire to become Christian”. “Why do you want to become Christian?”. “Because I believe in Christ.” “What does the faith in Christ give you?” “Eternal Life.” This is the simplicity of children who allow themselves to be struck by a friendship that embraces them and renders them real and true missionaries.

“It is their questions that open them up to God, not the beautifully structured lessons of Catechism.”

A Letter from the Principal

Dear Nativity Families,

As always, we are finishing a busy week of school. Students are in the middle of STAR testing and the basketball regular season just finished its final week. Our school families had a beautiful gingerbread house making competition and gala tickets close this weekend. If you have not already made plans, please join us at the gala. More than anything, this is a moment for us to be together as a community in support of our school and for this reason, we greatly value your presence.

We are now in the season of ordinary time where we focus on ordering our life toward God. The life of the school is also in this ordered cadence of learning and formation. These next months are always a moment to really grow as a school in our academic, social, and spiritual life. Please continue to keep our teachers and students in your prayers during this time of growth.

A HOMILY FROM THE POPE

JANUARY 15, 2023

The Gospel of today's liturgy (cf. Jn 1:29-34) relates the testimony of John the Baptist on Jesus, after having baptized him in the river Jordan. He says: "After me comes a man who ranks before me, for he was before me" (vv. 29-30).

This declaration, this witness, reveals John's spirit of service. He was sent to prepare the way for the Messiah, and had done so without sparing himself. Humanly speaking, one would think that he would be given a "prize", a prominent place in Jesus' public life. But no. John, having accomplished his mission, knows how to step aside, he withdraws from the scene to make way for Jesus. He has seen the Spirit descend upon him (cf. vv. 33-34), he has indicated him as the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world, and now he in turn humbly listens. He goes from prophet to disciple. He preached to the people, gathered disciples and trained them for a long time. Yet he does not bind anyone to himself. And this is difficult, but it is the sign of the true educator: not binding people to himself. John does this: he sets his disciples in Jesus' footsteps. He is not interested in having a following for himself, in gaining prestige and success, but he bears witness and then takes a step back, so that many would have the joy of meeting Jesus. We can say: he opens the door, then he leaves.

With this spirit of service, with his capacity to give way to Jesus, John the Baptist teaches us an important thing: freedom from attachments. Yes, because it is easy to become attached to roles and positions, to the need to be esteemed, recognized and rewarded. And this, although natural, is not a good thing, because service involves gratuitousness, taking care of others without benefit for oneself, without ulterior motives, without expecting something in return. It is good for us, too, to cultivate, like John, the virtue of setting ourselves aside at the right moment, bearing witness that the point of reference of life is Jesus. To step aside, to learn to take one's leave: I have completed this mission, I have had this meeting, I will step aside and leave room to the Lord. To learn to step aside, not to take something for ourselves in recompense.

Let us think of how important this is for a priest, who is required to preach and celebrate, not out of self-importance or interest, but to accompany others to Jesus. Think of how important this is for parents, to raise their children with many sacrifices, but then they have to leave them free to take their own path in work, in marriage, in life. It is good and right that parents continue to assure their presence, saying to their children, "We will not leave you by yourselves", but with discretion, without intrusiveness. The freedom to grow. And the same applies to other spheres, such as friendships, life as a couple, community life. Freeing oneself from attachments to one's own ego and knowing how to step aside come at a cost, but are very important: this is the decisive step in order to grow in the spirit of service, without looking for something in return.

Brothers, sisters, let us try to ask ourselves: are we capable of making space for others? Of listening to them, of leaving them free, of not binding them to ourselves, demanding recognition? And also, of letting them speak, at times. Do not say, "But you know nothing!". Let them speak, make space for others. Do we attract others to Jesus, or to ourselves? And furthermore, following the example of John: do we know how to rejoice in the fact that people take their own path and follow their calling, even if this entails some detachment from us? Do we rejoice in their achievements, with sincerity and without envy? This is letting others grow.

May Mary, the servant of the Lord, help us to be free from attachments, to make way for the Lord and to give space to others.
